the doorway of the zɔŋ hut stands a post with a large stone on top, and a long stick, bent in the shape of a butterfly net and bound round with leaves. 'I tie up the lightning with this', said my informant. On the ground near the stick is a pot containing 'roots' in a decoction in which the inmates of the compound bathe. 'I also use this sa-bagr (lightning shrine) to bring rain, only the lightning I tie.'

All the above may be seen in Fig. 87. On the left of this doorway is a shrine (ba bagr) of the spirit 'of the owner of the compound' (an ancestor?) with a cow horn the remains of a past sacrifice hanging on the hut wall above it. To the left of this again is another shrine, that of the 'owner's' mother. Resting on the ba-bagr is a pot, called a ba' bugr. 'This pot is the shrine of spirits once served by my father and my elder brother. I brought some earth from it (a bagr?) and put it in the pot, so I now say when sacrificing, "My father receive these offerings and give to your bugr", instead of saying, "My father receive and give to your father". I own my grandfather's Wen (Nankane Ɣint), it can descend (on my death) to whoever he (the spirit) names, but the spirit of our ancestor always goes to the eldest.'

Passing now through the main entrance, between two grass-roofed huts, one of which is the zɔŋ, the other called nos dog (fowl house), we enter the zan-pak (cattle-kraal). The cattle in this case were in charge of Fulani herdsmen who were paid by being given the milk. Inside this yard were two other huts, one for goats and sheep, and one for a horse. Surrounding this yard were four suites of rooms called dog (compare Nankane deo, pl. detto). These dog were those of:

(a) Ɣi-dan's wife.
(b) An unmarried son of the Ɣi-dan.
(c) The wife of the Ɣi-dan's younger brother.
(d) Dog of another of Ɣi-dan's wives.

Inside the main yard is a hut with two doors opposite each other called zon-tug (lit. pass straight through), where the women sit. The second doorway of this hut leads right into the yard (zak) of one of the dog (suites) in which is a shrine called meŋ Wen (lit. one's own God), a stone let into a circular mud mound. Beside this shrine is a pot full of roots, called dendeuk duk or chameleon's pot. 'I saw two chameleons one day copulating. I was told this is a forbidden thing, so I went to one who had medicine for this and he told me to bring roots. When a child is born to me, I bathe it with water from the roots. Before the baa (soothsayer) told me to do this, my children used to die.'
